

Getting Started with FamilySearch Family Tree

Welcome to the pilot launch of the FamilySearch Family Tree. As the eventual replacement of new.familysearch.org, Family Tree provides several significant improvements to new.familysearch.org:

- It is part of FamilySearch.org. Just sign in to see it.
- It is easier to navigate:
 - You can see more than four generations of your tree at a time.
 - You can zoom in and out.
 - You can easily see children, other spouses, details, and other information.
- Family Tree is designed to become the most accurate genealogical database that is online. You can add new information, delete wrong information, and make corrections. You can also provide reasons that explain why information is correct, so that others will be less likely to change it without a better reason.
- You can attach sources to validate accurate information. If the source is online, you can even provide a link to it.
- You can communicate and work with other people who are working on your family lines. A new watch list makes it easy to manage the notifications that you receive.
- You will soon be able to submit a person's name for ordinances.

Remember that Family Tree is still under development. You can do almost all of the same things that you did in new.familysearch.org. But we ask for your patience as we work on these features, which will be added in the next few months:

- Reserve a person's ordinances.
- Use data entry templates Latin, Cyrillic, Asian, and other names.
- Delete a person from the database.
- Find or merge duplicate records.
- Sign in to use the system for someone else.

This document provides some basic instructions to help you get started with Family Tree. For more instructions, including video demonstrations and a detailed reference guide, follow these instructions:

1. Click the Help link, which is located in the upper-right corner of the FamilySearch.org screen.
2. Scroll down until you see the section of materials for Family Tree.
3. For the complete list of available materials, click See the whole list.

To see materials that help you with the temple-related features of Family Tree, you must be signed in to FamilySearch.org with an LDS Account. If you are not signed in or if you are signed in with a public account, you will see only the public materials.

Basic Instructions

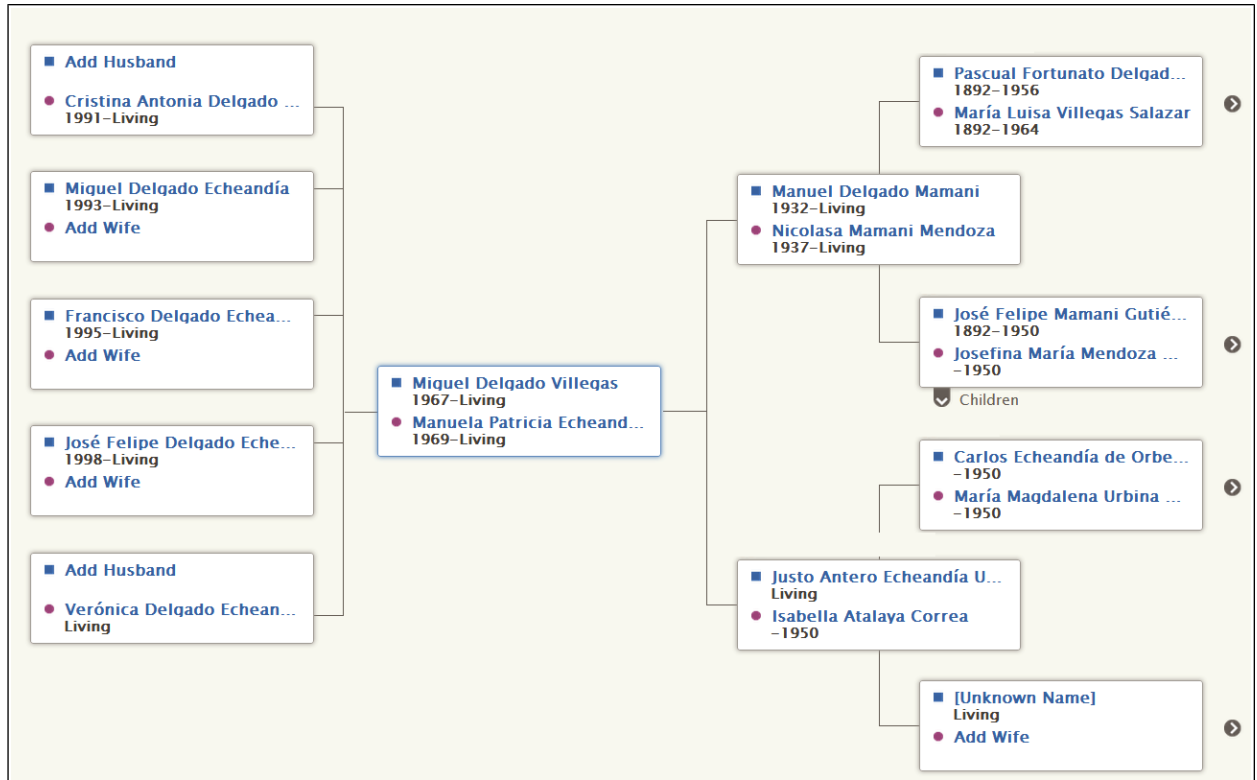

Navigating the Tree

When you see your family information on the tree, you can display more generations, resize the tree, move families to different places on the screen, and change to different spouses or parents if a person had more than one.

1. If you are not already in Family Tree, go to it:

- a. Go to www.familysearch.org, and sign in.
- b. Click the Family Tree link, which appears in the upper-left corner next to the FamilySearch logo. If the Family Tree link does not appear, it means that your account has not been authorized to see Family Tree. To authorize your account, go to http://www.familysearch.org/invite/familytree_tab, and enter the user name and password of your LDS Account. You need do authorize your account one time only.

By default, your ancestors appear on the tree, with you in the main position. As you use other features in Family Tree, click Tree to return to this screen.

2. On the tree, click the appropriate option for what you want to do:

Adding and Correcting Information about People and Relationships

In Family Tree, you add and correct information about people and the relationships that connect them into families.

As you add or edit information, you follow a general process in which you review the information that has already been entered, including the sources and reason statements that have already been added. If you have more accurate information, you can enter it, explain how you arrived at this conclusion, and attach the sources that you used.

Tip: Before you add, edit, or delete information in Family Tree, you should make sure that your user profile is set to display your contact information, at least an e-mail address. To set your contact information, go to new.familysearch.org, and click Update My Profile and Preferences. Eventually, you will be able to update your user profile directly from Family Tree.

1. Open the details page of the person whose information you need to add, edit, or delete.
 - a. On the tree, click the person's name.
 - b. On the person's summary card, click View Person.

2. Make the changes.

The following chart lists the types of changes that you can make and provides the first few clicks.

3. As you make changes, be sure that you do the following:

- Review the information that has already been entered, especially the reason statements and the sources. Make changes only when you have more accurate information.
- In the reason field, enter a good explanation for the change.

Family Tree saves your changes, identifies you as the contributor, and updates the change history.

Attach sources that support the information that you entered.

Attaching Sources to People and Relationships

You can use online records to add richness to the tree. Seeing your ancestor's name on a record can increase your awareness that your ancestors were real people and that you really are connected to them. Adding sources also proves the accuracy of the information in the tree. In Family Tree, you can attach sources to people, couple relationships, and parent-child relationships.

Before you can attach a source to a person or relationship, that source must be in your source box. Your source box stores the sources that you are working with.

You can get a source into your source box in these ways:

- You can enter the source by typing in a title, URL, citation, and notes.
- You can find a record on familysearch.org, and add it to your source box. When you add a source this way, FamilySearch.org does all of the hard work for you. It creates the source title, URL, and citation. All you have to do is enter any notes that you want. If FamilySearch.org improves any of the information about this source, it makes the changes in Family Tree for you.

Note: You cannot currently upload an image from your computer for use as a source. If the source is available online, use the online version. If it is not available online, you can upload the image to a photo sharing site and link to it there. (For example, upload the image to 1000memories.com, aboutone.com, familyhistorynotebook.com, flickr.com, photobucket.com, photoloom.com, or picasa.google.com.) Some of these websites may be filtered at locations where computers or Internet connections are available for public use.

- You can find a source that is attached to someone in the tree and add it to your source box for use on your own ancestors.

Each person, couple relationship, and parent-child relationship can have up to 1,000 sources.

1. Open the person's details page.

2. Indicate whether you want to attach the source to the person or to a relationship:

- To attach the source to the person, scroll down to the Sources section of the person's details page.

- To attach the source to a couple relationship, scroll down to the Family Members section, and click the View link that is in the box that shows the husband and wife. When the Couple Relationship page appears, scroll down to the Sources section.
- To attach the source to a parent-child relationship, scroll down to the Family Members section, and hover your mouse cursor over the child's name. Click the View link that appears. When the Parent-Child Relationship page appears, scroll down to the Sources section.

3. Click Go to Source Box.
Your source box appears.

4. Attach the source:

- If the source is already in your source box, find the source in your source box, and click the Attach link that is to the right of the source's title. You can also click the source's title, and then click the Attach link.
- If the source is not in your source box, click Create Source, enter the source's title and other information, and click Save and Attach.

5. Enter a reason that indicates what this source proves and why it is being attached.

Focus your reason on the facts that the source proves. Be polite and factual. This field is not the place for lengthy discussions or debates. If the facts require debate or discussion, use the discussion feature instead.

6. Click Attach.

If you want to save this source but do not want to attach it, click Cancel. The source is saved in your source box and will be available for your use from now on.

7. (Optional) If you are attaching the source to a person and want to tag the source as pertaining to the person's name, gender, birth, christening, death, or burial, follow these steps:

- Click the source's title.
- Click Tag.

Temple-Related Features of Family Tree

Members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints can use temple-related features and see ordinance information in Family Tree. These features show up automatically when you sign in using an LDS Account.

If you are signed in to use Family Tree as a Church member, you see the following features:

Temple Tab

The Temple option is located near the top of the screen.

Use this option to do the following:

- See a list of the ordinances that you have reserved.
- Print and reprint Family Ordinance Requests.
- Assign ordinances that you have reserved to the temple.
- Unreserve ordinances.

In the future, you will also be able to reserve ordinances from within Family Tree. But for now, you must still do that in new.familysearch.org.

Family Tree

The family tree uses icons to indicate whether a family's ordinances are done:

- If the family member's ordinances are not done, the temple icon appears. To see an explanation of the icon, hover your mouse cursor over the couple's information.

- If the family member's ordinances are done, the temple icon appears when you hover your mouse cursor over the couple's information.

- Temple icons do not appear if family members are living.

A Person's Summary Card

If you are signed in to use Family Tree as a Church member, a person's summary card identifies whether a person's ordinances are done.

Using Family Tree to Prepare to Do Temple Ordinances for Your Ancestors

In Family Tree, you can print and reprint Family Ordinance Requests, assign ordinances to the temple, and unreserve ordinances. The ability to reserve ordinances will be added in the future. Until then, use new.familysearch.org to reserve ordinances.

Before you can do the following temple-related tasks in Family Tree, you must first reserve ordinances in new.familysearch.org.

1. From within Family Tree, click Temple.
The list of people whose ordinances you have reserved appears.

Tip: If your Temple Ordinances list takes a long time to load, try canceling some reservations so that your list becomes more manageable.

Important: If no one appears on this list, it means that you have not yet reserved any ordinances. Until the features required to reserve ordinances are added to Family Tree, please go to new.familysearch.org to do this.

2. Indicate what you want to do next:
 - To print a Family Ordinance Request, click the check box of each individual whose ordinances you want to do next. Then click Print or Reprint Request.
 - To reassign an individual's ordinances, click that individual's Reassign link, which is located in the Assigned to column.
 - To unreserve an individual's ordinances, click that individual's Unreserve link, which is located at the far-right side of the screen.
 - To see an explanation of the ordinance icons (the colored boxes that contain the letters B, C, I, E, SP, and SS), click Legend.

Tip: You can also hover your mouse cursor over an icon to see its meaning.
